My Ships

Enemy Ships

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Set up: Print out two copies of this printable. Each of you put on 5 items of clothing. Mark your ships on the "my ships" board by filling in appropriate number of squares (pencil might work best).

Play: Played just like the boardgame, but with a sexy twist. On your turn, call out a letter and a number of a row and column on the "enemy ships" grid. Your opponent checks that space on their "my ships" grid, and says "miss" if there are no ships there, or "hit" if you guessed a space that contained a ship. If you guessed a miss, your opponent marks that square with a black X. If you guessed a hit, your opponent marks that square with a red X. Whenever one of your ships has every slot filled with red Xs, you must announce to your opponent that he has sunk your ship. Once one of your ships is sunk, then you must remove one item of clothing.

Victory: The first player to sink all opposing ships WINS! Loser is left with no clothes. Uh Oh! What happens from that point on is non of my buisness :)
